

But there is additional training which an individual becomes eligible for if he does reenlist the second time.

Mr. HÉBERT. Yes, but he doesn't want the additional training.

Colonel HILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. HÉBERT. He has enough training to go out and get that job, and as you say, at four or five times what the Government can afford to pay him.

So that money is lost. That investment in that man is lost.

Mr. KITCHIN. But they may—we gave the President the emergency powers to extend the obligated service the other day. And at least I expect this emergency is going to continue for some time.

Secretary IMIRIE. Yes, sir. And that is what the colonel addressed himself to.

We are considering specifically extending skills we need, and so forth.

Mr. HÉBERT. Under the recent legislation.

Secretary IMIRIE. Under the recent legislation.

But I understood the chairman was addressing himself to what are we going to do over the long run, notwithstanding.

Mr. HÉBERT. Over the long term. This is emergency.

Secretary IMIRIE. I am not aware of any such plans. But I admit it is out of my field.

Mr. HÉBERT. But it is something I think the services should give attention to.

Secretary IMIRIE. Yes, sir.

Mr. NORBLAD. What is your tour on these so-called hilltops that you face in upper Canada and in Alaska and the Aleutians?

Mr. MORRILL. Twelve months.

Mr. HÉBERT. We now get to the interesting part of the hearings, of the contracts.

Do you have those contracts?

Mr. COURTNEY. Mr. Sandweg is prepared to address himself to the research and development contracts, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HÉBERT. Mr. Secretary, I presume your people are ready?

Secretary IMIRIE. Yes, sir.

Just call off the contracts you wish to discuss. I will name the witnesses.

Mr. HÉBERT. We will start off with Bryn Mawr. That is the most interesting.

Dr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, I am Dr. Charles Hutchinson.

Mr. HÉBERT. Sit down and be comfortable. We want you to be relaxed.

Dr. HUTCHINSON. I am Deputy Director of Life Sciences in the Air Force Office of Scientific Research.

I can thoroughly understand your interest in Bryn Mawr.

I am afraid that anything that I say is likely to prove a disappointment—anything that I am at least prepared to say.

I have another apology to make.

I am a psychologist. And anything that an intelligent human being can say in simple English, a psychologist can say in jargon that is not understandable even to another psychologist.

Mr. HÉBERT. We are accustomed to such jargon.
