

Governor SANFORD. There are areas in the mountain areas, the work training, the second category, should fit very well in those areas helping to develop what is going to be more and more in demand, and that is recreation, both public and private.

Mr. PERKINS. There are thousands of youngsters that you could put to work in your State under work training programs and in positions that will continue to go unfulfilled. Am I correct in that statement?

Governor SANFORD. I think so. As a matter of fact, I think we will find that we have far more people than we can get around to under the present provisions, but I think we will not go lacking for people who need the training.

Mr. PERKINS. I have one further question, Governor Sanford. Can you visualize the community actions program doing something in the way of repairing deteriorated housing, which is another great problem we have in Appalachia; poor education, poor housing, both of which contribute to a sense of hopelessness?

Governor SANFORD. Yes, there have been two or three good examples of that around the Nation, of how that has been done. We have our people looking at it. We have not done much about it ourselves, except these community projects, several of them put a great deal of emphasis on the cleanup and paintup and fixup programs of various neighborhoods. All of them contemplate the development of a more wholesome neighborhood, part of which is housing.

I would like to see us do some other things in housing that we have not done, that this program does not envision; but I think in any event here is a start to developing more wholesome housing.

Mr. PERKINS. Do something in the rural areas and improve community facilities in rural areas?

Governor SANFORD. Yes.

Mr. PERKINS. I have taken too much time, but you have been a very interesting witness, Governor Sanford.

Mr. Landrum.

Mr. LANDRUM. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Governor, throughout these hearings, which have now been in process for about 3 weeks, we have had eloquent statements from Cabinet officers, under Cabinet officers, from private businessmen, from elected officials, including other Governors, all of which has been tremendously helpful to me and to the committee. I believe, however, that yesterday the three gentlemen appearing from the business sector—Mr. Nichols, from Olin Mathieson Co.; Mr. Martin, from Carson-Pirie-Scott Co.; and Mr. Ralph Besse, from Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.—and then this representation by you this morning probably are the highlights of the hearings insofar as the emphasis laid upon the need for the legislation is concerned.

Certainly that was true with the appearance of the three men from the business sector yesterday. This morning, however, I see in your magnificent demonstration here a sort of calm competence that derives from very thorough study of the problem and at least some effort to implement some remedies to meet the results of your study.

As one who participated in the early drafting and the final drafting of this bill that is now before the committee, I am aware of the experience, advantages, and help we had from the study which you had con-
