

Mr. ARREDONDO. Yes. There were maybe 11 of us in jail; we got different bond.

Mr. THOMPSON. I think you are right. I think there were 11 of you arrested on November 8, 1966.

Mr. ARREDONDO. Yes, sir.

Mr. THOMPSON. For picketing on October 30.

Mr. ARREDONDO. Right.

Mr. THOMPSON. I see.

Mr. ARREDONDO. The bonds were set at different amounts. Some bonds were set at $1,500, some of them were set at $500; anything up from $500 to $1,000 to $1,500.

Mr. THOMPSON. When are you going to be tried on your charge?

Mr. ARREDONDO. That is one thing I don't know, is when they are going to go to trial.

Mr. THOMPSON. Was the only charge against you secondary picketing?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Secondary picketing.

Mr. THOMPSON. Not disturbing the peace?

Mr. ARREDONDO. No, sir.

Mr. THOMPSON. Not assault and battery?

Mr. ARREDONDO. No, sir.

Mr. THOMPSON. Just secondary picketing?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Secondary picketing.

Mr. THOMPSON. Do you work in the fields?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Yes, sir; I have been a farmworker all my life.

Mr. THOMPSON. What do you do? What kind of farmwork do you do?

Mr. ARREDONDO. I can operate a tractor and pick cantaloupes and do most any kind of work in the fields.

Mr. THOMPSON. How much do you make an hour?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Before November I was operating a tractor at night working 13 hours at 80 cents an hour.

Mr. THOMPSON. At 80 cents an hour?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Yes.

Mr. THOMPSON. Thirteen hours?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Thirteen hours. I went to work at 6 o'clock in the evening and left the field at 7 o'clock the next morning.

Mr. THOMPSON. At 80 cents an hour?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Eighty cents an hour.

Mr. THOMPSON. How many days a week?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Seven days a week.

Mr. THOMPSON. Seven days a week?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Yes.

Mr. THOMPSON. You made a lot of money, didn't you?

How much would you have made if you had been picking cantaloupes?

Mr. ARREDONDO. Well, in that last year they were still paying 80 cents an hour and for picking cantaloupes, carrying a bag that weighs about 90 to 100 pounds every time you fill it up with cantaloupes—

Mr. THOMPSON. Our arithmetic shows you drove a tractor 91 hours a week.
