

A series of questions was asked to determine how these young men and women spent their leisure time and to what extent they were involved with the community.

Leisure Activities

First each person was asked how often since leaving the Job Corps he had participated in a whole roster of various activities -- from listening to music, to reading, to sports. The following table gives the percentage of those who said they were involved in the activity often (on a regular basis:)