

39.

Observation: As more and more individuals graduate or dropout of the Job Corps, the Corps' reputation for past successes and failures will become a major factor in recruiting new enrollees. The importance of improving learning opportunities and the environment in the center is clear not only to gain the support of the public but also of ex-Corpsmen, for their influence on their peer group is potentially great.

Reasons For Not Joining Job Corps

In order to better determine the reasons for not joining the Job Corps each respondent was given a list of possible reasons and asked to choose those that had been most important to him: