

Chairman PERKINS. We will call on Sargent Shriver to introduce the directors of the other phases of the Office of Economic Opportunity and I understand we are going to VISTA. That is my suggestion immediately. We will not hold any meeting tomorrow. We will convene at 9:30 a.m. Monday, to consider title V of the higher education bill including the Teacher Corps.

Immediately thereafter we will get back with the presentation of Sargent Shriver on the Economic Opportunity Act Amendments of 1967.

Now, Sargent, how do you want to proceed?

Mr. GOODELL. Mr. Chairman, a further question. How are you going to proceed? I think there are a number of further questions with reference to the Jobs Corps. Do you prefer we withhold and let him make a total presentation of the question subsequently on the various points? We have been operating up to now under a 5-minute rule. It is impossible to go into any depth or breadth or for witnesses to be complete in their answers or for us to present a complete question under the 5-minute rule.

We all agree to that. But we also agree we have to have a 5-minute rule to protect some of the people with less seniority to get any chance to question at all the first time around. I know the Chair wants to have ample questioning and probing of all of these programs. It doesn't make any particular difference to me which way we proceed.

Chairman PERKINS. I know the gentleman from New York wants to probe deeply in connection with the Job Corps. Are you in a position to get back to the Job Corps later this afternoon? If so, we will present VISTA at this time and then we will go back to interrogation.

Mr. GOODELL. I would be glad to have them go ahead and present VISTA if that is what you prefer and come back to the Job Corps either this afternoon or Monday. I do have an engagement at 5 o'clock with the White House fellows. They have invited me to the Brookings Institution to meet with them at 5 o'clock and I wouldn't want to have to miss that.

Mrs. GREEN. Would the gentleman yield? If we heard from the other departments and then later brought just one back at a time would that conserve the time of the people who are to be questioned instead of having everybody appear today and all together, and then come back to the Job Corps in some depth?

Mr. GOODELL. I think I would be glad to go along with whatever is most convenient to Mr. Shriver and his assistants and to the members of the committee in their questioning. I do understand from the chairman that next week we are going to continue with the Office of Economic Opportunity so they have a full presentation before we get to other witnesses and that we will have ample opportunity to question before we get to other witnesses.

Chairman PERKINS. That is correct and because of the new members on the committee we will have in depth hearings. Undoubtedly we will want to recall witnesses.

Mr. DELLENBACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Chairman PERKINS. Yes.

Mr. DELLENBACK. Mr. Chairman, may I also ask this in connection with this same line of inquiry? I know that it was the chairman's
