

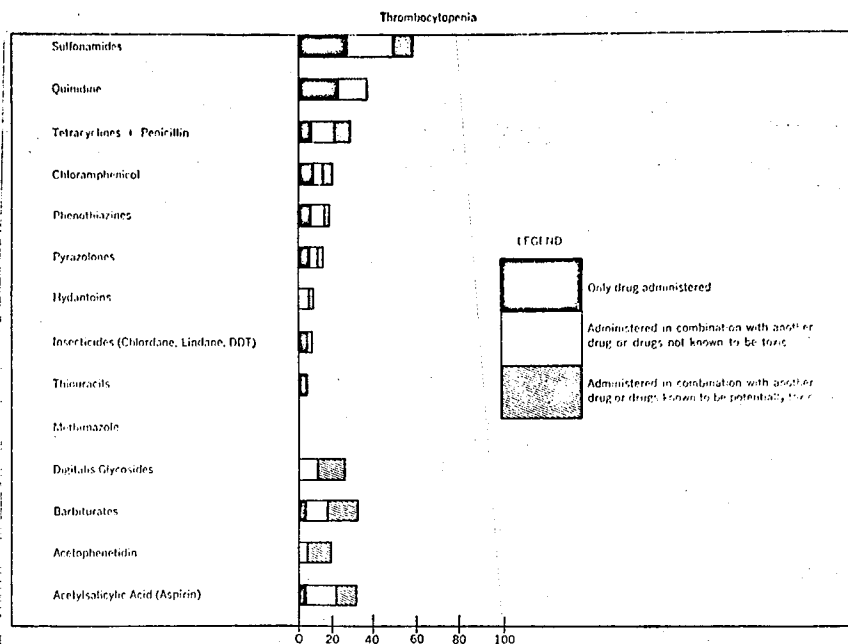

Fig. 2.—Drugs commonly associated with development of thrombocytopenia.

Figure 2 shows that the sulfonamides and quinidine, when given alone or with other drugs not known to be toxic, are associated with the development of a number of cases of thrombocytopenia, thus establishing a convincing cause-effect relationship.

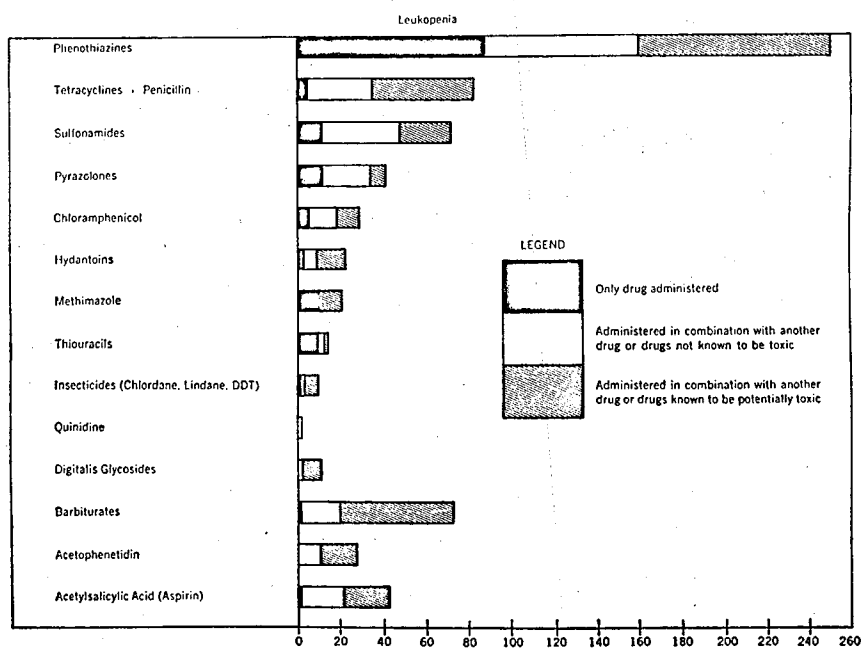

Fig. 3.—Drugs commonly associated with development of leukopenia.