The largest market, the north central, in 1965, was 8.6 million barrels a day. Oil had the largest share of that market, 38 percent; coal was not far behind with 33 percent; the gas market was 28 percent, and water was 1 percent.

Oil also leads in the next largest market, the east coast, where it had more than one-half, and coal was a little bit more than a quarter.

In the Rocky Mountain area oil led with one-half of the market and
