
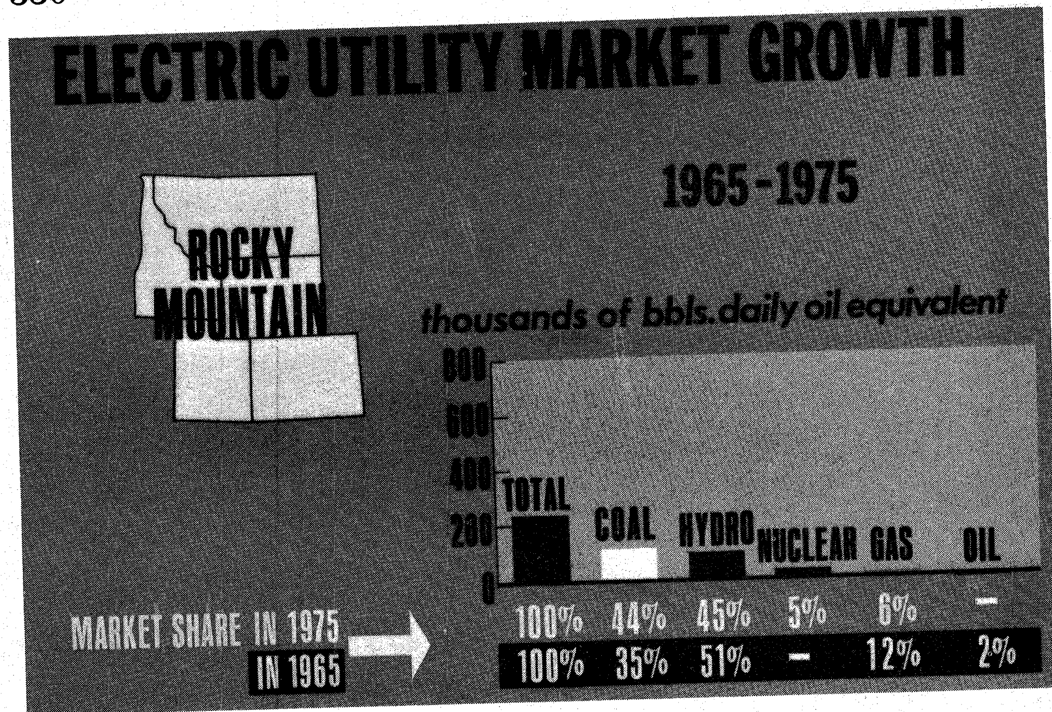

CHART 22

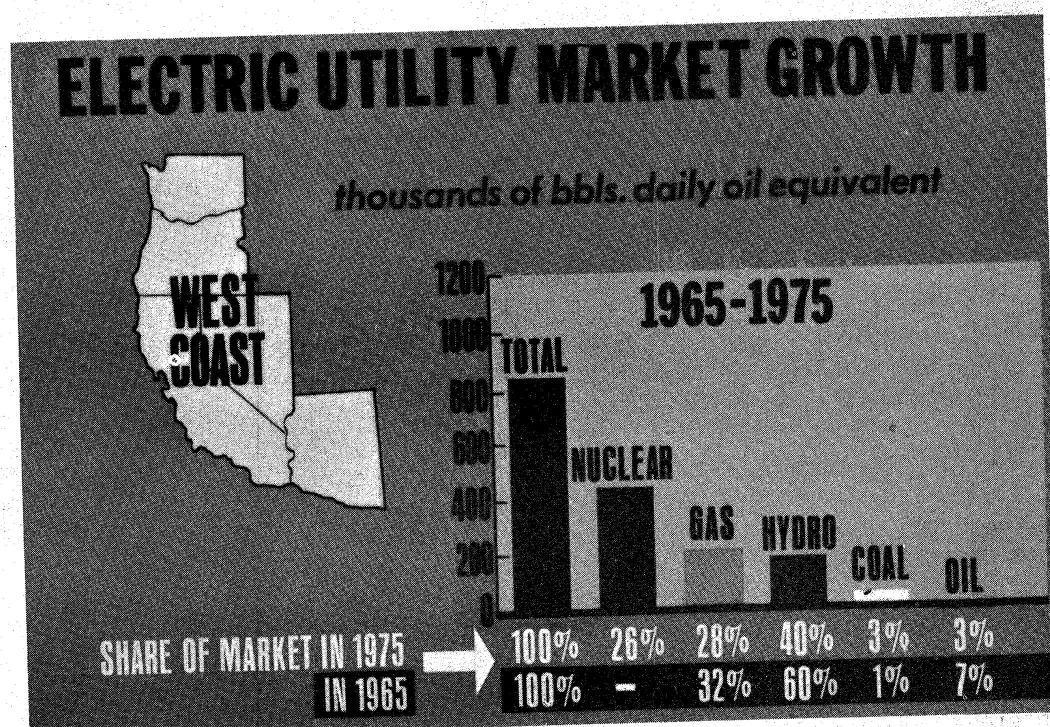

CHART 23

For the growth expected, in the north central region, gas would exceed the expansion of the overall market, gas being substituted increasingly for coal, it being a more attractive market to some industrial consumers. And, of course, the price of natural gas entering the market is exceedingly low in respect to the other sources of energy. This is one of the results of the Federal regulation of gas moving in