

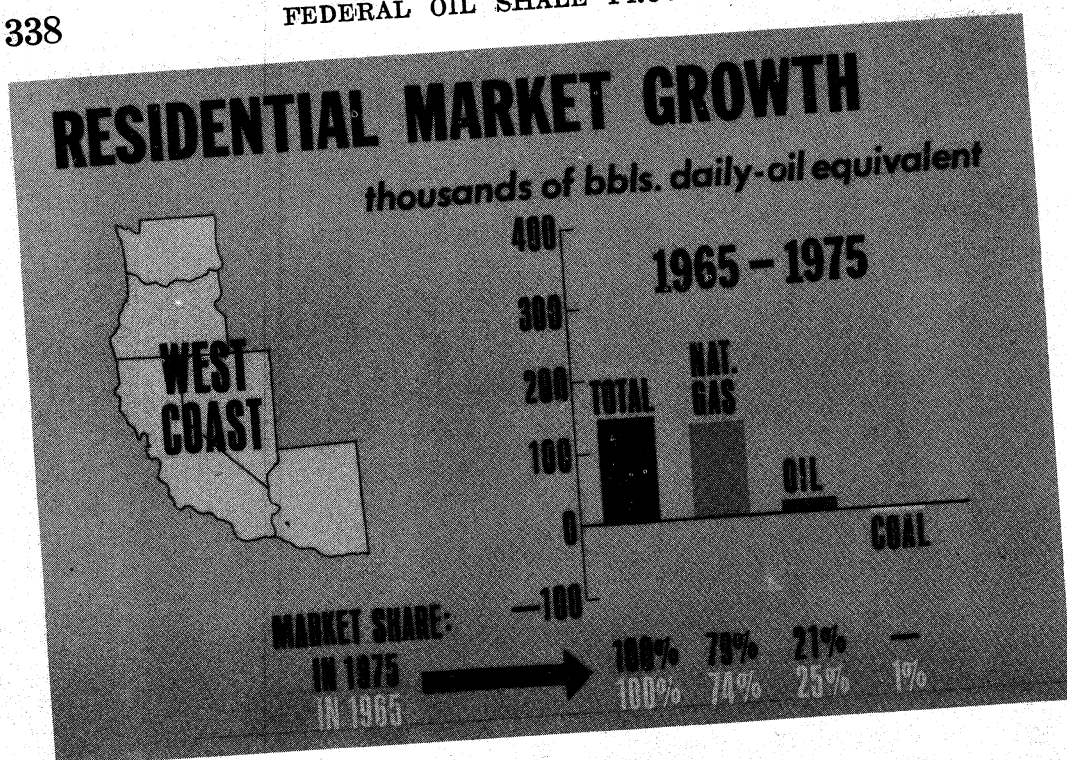

CHART 38

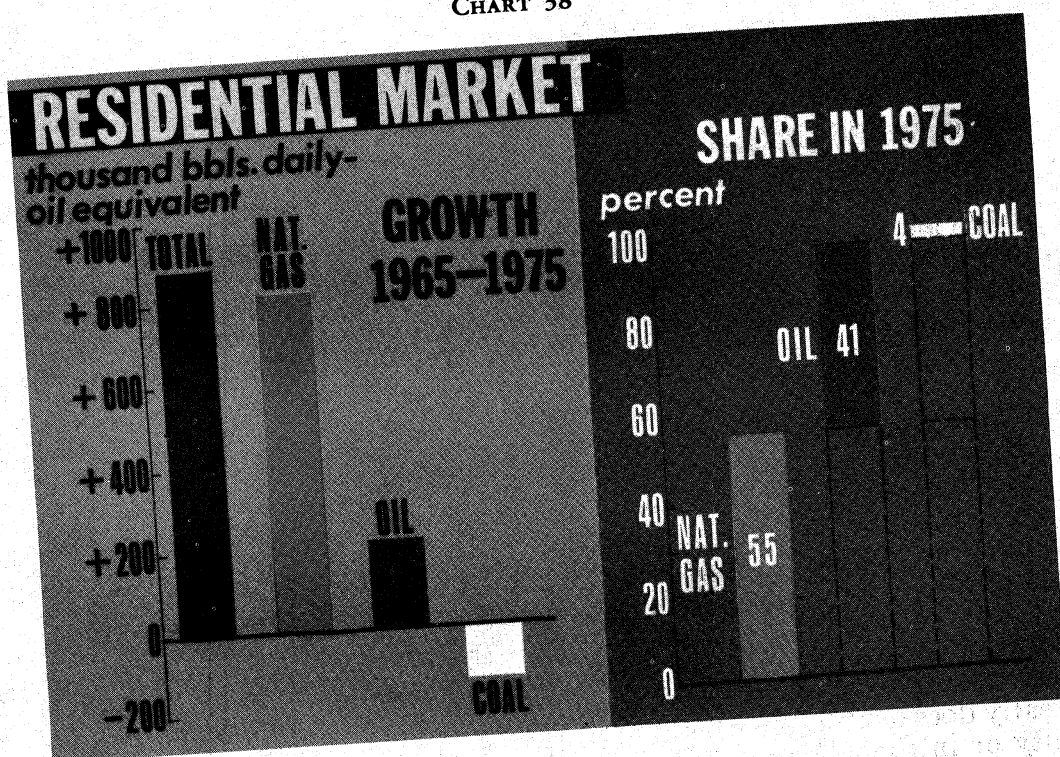

CHART 39

persuade any of us to turn up the thermostat in our homes beyond the comfort level. But we might be persuaded to use our automobiles more, and in that way the transportation market could be stimulated. The airlines might persuade people to travel more, and in that way the transportation market could be stimulated. We have other built-in ingredients for growth, however. Because of our population growth