

fund ended with a zero balance. Deficits are made up by the general fund and surpluses are returned to the general fund. At this point the foundation creates a new budget and reallocates to the funds for the coming year.

Due to the widespread use of this accounting system in government and other non-profit organizations it provides evidence of philanthropic intent through normal institutional-type accounting.

* * * * *