

Our highways are saturated with this type and all other types of hazards. This is why I am here, to point these things out. Everyone is talking about highway safety, but how could we have highway safety when we have these lying around and nobody is doing anything about them?

Here are two views of another type of sign, "167 Street," notice the two concrete pillars.

These should be signs that go down easy and with a thin pole and no concrete bases. If a fellow makes a mistake, then let him knock down the sign, instead of wiping out all his passengers and damaging his car.
