

And at the same time as these people were getting killed at the former location, we were opening up brand new highways with this same "ideal" situation.

This highway was just opened up in November. The same thing will happen when a car hits this.

Now, I read a few books on this particular type of W-beam installation, and they say to terminate this thing and fasten it to the bridge abutment. This was put out years ago. And here we are opening up highways like this today.
