

Now, this slide shows you some car did hit this area and knocked that warning marker down. If you catch it right, you can wipe out a passenger.

This wall should be smooth, but this is the way in New York State they build these things, and they are still building them today.

This is the way it should have been done. There is not any reason why you should have any bridge abutment at all, especially on the depressed highway. Here, you see even the sign has been put on the wall.
