

Here you see a relighting project, which is going to be good. Notice the light pole in the gore area?

Now it is gone, and this is a fine job. You had a hazard in the gore area, an indecision point, and it was removed— and I was proud. In fact, I thought I had something to do with this, because I was squawking right along. But a couple of months later, I found them putting light poles right back in the gore areas again.

