

This points out if you bolted this end to the board, a car could slide by. But that 15 inches is enough to grab it.

If you look at this, riding along you think it is a good job; but I went up and took a close view of this.

First, let me point out there is an offset, or bridge abutment, that is not needed. This is a depressed highway and you should not need or have such abutments on depressed highways.
