

Here you see the brandnew square-type box beam, the best rail we have and I think it is good. They call for burying the end, but because the end is sticking up like that, a car can run right through it.

Here you can see where a square beam went right through this car and came out on the other side. This driver was lucky; it went right by him. Maybe it will go through the next guy. And this is very new work.
