

This is what I am talking about. If you get up on that shoulder, you will head toward that abutment, but you will never reach it. You will be killed first by that railend.

This is about maintenance. There never used to be a guardrail at all of these abutments so they later decided to put in a guardrail. But it takes many months and I feel it takes too long to finish the job. There should be more consideration for the motorist. Here you see where they started to install a new center rail.
