

In August, a month later, on the Capital Beltway two young students ran into the end of a guardrail. In this case the guardrail again went through the car, through the windshield, through the passenger compartment, and out the rear window, extending many feet.

