

The guardrail I pointed at was this piece. Here is a distance of about 40 to 50 feet, with a guardrail ending and then it picks up again. I think that picture is self-explanatory.

This is the concrete drain that I have been talking about, and I pointed it out to you in a number of places. This piece of steel sits on top of the concrete; it is not anchored. And the reason for that is so they can remove it and get down there to clean the drain if it is clogged up.
