

approach rail is slightly flared as you move into this section toward the decision point.

Here is a good view of the gore showing how the rail sweeps off to the right and on down the exit ramp.

The rail picks up in the gore just a little way beyond the gore. These points that you see in here [indicating], these white spots are black and white painting on the asphalt curb to give it higher visibility.

Here is the same view under poor light conditions and during a snowstorm, indicating again the relative position of the rail, the position of the gore.

