

And this is doubled back one panel—excuse me, only one panel.

Now this is new work. We moved away from I-69, which is the route we were just looking at, and this is a portion of I-70, east of Indianapolis. And this is not yet even open to traffic. There is work still going on on it. So this is a brand new piece of work. And as you look at the first entrance ramp on the approach to a structure, this is what you see. The improvement has been made to lengthen the rails, both on the right and on the left, and the rails have been buried. The approach ends have been buried.

