

Still another picture of that same pole.

Here is another location. In fact, during the evening that we stayed over there in Providence, this pole went down. We saw it working the night before and down in the morning when we first came out. So this is a very fresh situation, the car that went across the roadway here—you can see the skid marks after he hit the pole.

