

Experience with the control box system which they have has been relatively good.

Now we are in Georgia, back to the section that is near Atlanta, where light poles are installed at this distance [indicating] which will measure just about a foot to the edge of the transformer base.

This is not an aluminum or otherwise frangible base. This is a steel pole all the way.

