

This is an installation in Rhode Island where they have attempted to duplicate what California initially conceived was a desirable media barrier, utilizing the cable and chain-link fence on a weak post. However, Mr. Beaton testified they would only use this on wider media than is installed here, inasmuch as there is considerable deflection. They would never use it with curb that close to it. After they installed this, they found that the turnbuckle presents an additional hazard. They have eliminated the lower cable. What happened here is that Rhode Island has installed something California has already discarded.
