

insurance either on a pay-as-you-go or a funded basis will reduce welfare, unless (a) market imperfections render the preexisting situation suboptimal, (b) the social welfare function calls for income redistribution, or (c) there are economies of scale in social insurance; none of these factors will be discussed here.